⁵ Presently, Article 6 of the Unif. Probate Code consists of three parts. Part I deals with provisions relating to the effects of death , Part II with multiple persons accounts, and Part III with transfer on death securities. To make matters complex, these three parts also appear, collectively or individually, in two other independent uniform laws. First, all three parts appear in, and collectively comprise, the Unif. NonProbate Transfers on Death Act. Second, Part 3 appears in, and exclusively comprises, the Unif. Transfer on Death Securities Act. To make matters even more complex, Washington has separately adopted each of the three parts. Moreover, presumably because Washington has not adopted the Unif. Probate Code, these three sections are not codified together in the Probate Code. Still more confusingly, WA has adopted two of the three presently recommended parts of Article VI, but not one of them, namely Part II, dealing with Multiple Persons Account. Instead of adopting in toto the 1989 revised version of the Part II, Washington has instead elected to remain with 1969 precursor. Finally, only Washington's adoption of the Transfer on Death Securities Act is considered to be a true adoption of the uniform law, while Washington's adoption of Parts I and II is considered to be substantially similar by the NCCUSL.

⁶ The date of adoption, 1917, is taken from the Commission's Biennial Reports as well as the National Conference's Handbook. However, several inconsistencies exist regarding this date. First, the date of adoption precedes the date of promulgation by the Conference. Second, the Revised Code of Washington Annotated does not refer to any session law or enacted code subsequent to 1881, even though the RCW states that § 5.44.050 is based, in part, on the Uniform Proof of Statutes Act, § 1. Finally, Uniform Laws Annotated does not list a session law for Washington in its table of Jurisdictions Adopting the uniform law.

Explanations:

Three acts reported by both the Washington State Uniform Legislation Commission and the NCCUSL to be uniform laws adopted in Washington, but not included in this table require further explanation:

Acknowledgment Act:	Both the REFERENCE BOOK and the HANDBOOK of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws maintains that Washington adopted this act; yet neither the ULA nor finally the RCW confirms this contention. Moreover, a memorandum exists in the archives of the Washington State Uniform Legislation Commission which indicates that, at least to the then present commissioners, Washington had never adopted, even substantially the National Conference's Uniform Acknowledgment Act, either originally or in one of its amended versions.

Arbitration Act (1956): Again, the HANDBOOK maintains that Washington adopted this act; yet neither the ULA nor finally the RCW confirms this contention.

Determination of Death Act: Once again, the HANDBOOK maintains that Washington adopted this act; yet neither the ULA nor finally the RCW confirms this contention.
